

Official Program Syllabi

Official program syllabi are required if you graduated within 10 years of the year you are applying.

- A program syllabus should outline the content of all the subjects you studied in your program. You must provide program syllabi for all the math, science and engineering/geoscience subjects you took.
- Program syllabi must be official documents published by the institution. Applicants must either provide a link to the appropriate location on the institution website or scanned versions of a hard copy publication, including the publishing information (usually on front and back inside and outside covers).
- Program syllabi must be from a time period that overlaps the time period that the applicant attended the institution.
- An applicant must provide proof, in the form of a letter from the institution, to prove that official program syllabi are not available.
- If you are unable to get a letter from the institution, you must provide acceptable proof to APEGS that you have attempted, on more than one occasion and by more than one means, to obtain such a letter.
- If official program syllabi are not available, then the Academic Review Committee (ARC) will conduct their review without them. However, this lack of information may result in the assignment of exams.
